Motion for Court Approval and Adoption of the Special Master's Supplemental Recommendations
Concerning Enhancement Awards

NOW INTO COURT COMES Daniel J. Balhoff, Special Master, and moves for the Court's approval and adoption of the Special Master's Supplemental Recommendation Concerning Enhancement Awards (filed on June 11, 2013) for the following reasons:

The Special Master has coordinated with the PSC and the CADA to procure and evaluate the claims submitted in accordance with the Court-established procedure in the matter between the PSC and Defendants (as well as its insurers).

On September 27, 2013, the Court approved the Special Master's recommendations concerning certain enhancement awards. This supplemental Motion includes those awards, as well as additional enhancement awards. The Special Master has also developed and implemented a method of informing the claimants of their enhancement awards and asks this Court to direct the

CADA to pay these awards at this time.

WHEREFORE, the Special Master prays that the Motion for Court Approval and Adoption of the Special Master's Supplemental Recommendations Concerning Enhancement Awards be granted.

Respectfully Submitted:

SECTION "N-5"

Special Master's Supplemental Recommendations
Concerning Enhancement Awards

On December 21, 2011, the Court ordered the parties to this litigation to engage in settlement discussions. Rec. Doc. 23958. In the following months, the undersigned (along with his partner, John Perry) mediated settlement negotiations on a defendant-by-defendant basis. Most of the defendants settled, but a few did not. The undersigned (in his role as Special Master) asked the plaintiffs to identify candidates for enhancement awards. The purpose of these awards was not to compensate the recipients for damages (medical or otherwise); instead, the purpose was to reimburse the recipients for effort that they may have expended in helping the attorneys litigate the lawsuit. 4 Newberg on Class Actions § 11:38 (4th ed.). For instance, recipients of enhancement awards in this case included bellwether plaintiffs, class representatives, and deponents. Rec. Doc. 25881. The time and effort that these people expended at the request of their lawyers helped the cause of all of the plaintiffs, and therefore justified an award from the general settlement fund (i.e., which was taxed against all of the plaintiffs). Again, these enhancement awards were not in the nature of a tort recovery. This is apparent from the Special Master's recommendations, which did not even reference the medical bills or injuries of the various recipients as criteria for determining the amount of the awards. The Court approved the enhancement awards that the undersigned recommended (Rec. Docs. 25887 and 25888; no one objected to or appealed the Court's two judgments on this subject), and in the Special Master's opinion those amounts are now due and owing.¹

After most manufacturers settled in early 2012, the Court began to schedule trial dates for the nonsettling defendants, which necessitated that many of the remaining plaintiffs submit to depositions and independent medical examinations. The remaining manufacturers ultimately settled.

At the Special Master's request, plaintiffs' counsel have now submitted candidates for enhancement awards with respect to the more recent settlements. These awards would serve the purpose of reimbursing those plaintiffs who, at the request of their attorneys, submitted themselves to depositions or independent medical examinations. As was the case with the previous candidates for enhancement awards, these individuals expended time and effort which benefitted the larger group (albeit a smaller universe of claimants than the first recipients of enhancement awards). Furthermore, as was the case with the previous enhancement awards, these awards will not take into account the recipients' tort damages (such as medical bills).

The Special Master has concluded that any member of this newer group should receive an enhancement award of $250 if he or she submitted to a deposition, and an additional $250 if he or she submitted to an independent medical examination. A listing of the recipients together with their suggested awards is included as Exhibit 1.²

¹Counsel for the Plaintiffs' Steering Committee has recently contacted the Special Master and requested payment of the enhancement awards.

²Exhibit 1 includes all persons who are to receive enhancement awards, including those persons who are to receive enhancement awards pursuant to the Court's September 27, 2012

As Exhibit 1 shows, the total payout for the enhancement awards will be $101,400, a relatively small portion of the entire settlement fund. The Special Master recommends that the Court direct the CADA to pay these awards at this time.³ These awards, which are being reduced to a dollar amount (as opposed to the point amount which is described in the Court-approved methodology), are unlike the awards that are grounded in the various claimants' tort claims (the compensatory awards). Those compensatory awards, which are being allocated in accordance with a Court-approved methodology, will be finally determined and distributed only after the Special Master conducts an objection process and all Court orders have been satisfied.

The Special Master has circulated this document to liaison counsel. It is his understanding that plaintiffs' liaison do not object. It is furthermore his understanding that some defendants may object.⁴ judgments. Therefore, Exhibit 1 must be read in tandem with Rec. Doc. 25881. The persons receiving enhancement awards pursuant to Rec. Doc. 25881 are not intended to receive duplicate awards as a result of these supplemental recommendations. The cumulative enhancement award to which a person is entitled due to the September 27, 2012 judgments and the instant recommendations is indicated in the column entitled "Total Enhancement Award" in Exhibit 1.

³The Special Master believes that the enhancement awards that were the subject of the Court's two September 27, 2012 judgments are due and owing without the need of a further order.

⁴The Special Master has also reviewed these recommendations with the Lien Resolution Administrator, who has determined that the enhancement awards do not implicate any liens that governmental health care organizations such as Medicare or Medicaid might have. See Exhibit 2.

Subject: FEMA Enhancement Awards

Dan,

The GRG Medicare Operations Department (MOD) has reviewed the Special Master's Supplemental Recommendations Concerning Enhancement Awards which has been filed with the US District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana. The Special Master's recommendation identifies a subset of the claimant population in the FEMA Trailer Formaldehyde Product Liability Litigation that qualifies for an enhancement award. This enhancement award is intended to compensate individual candidates based on their time and effort in helping the attorneys litigate the lawsuit for the benefit of the larger group. These candidates include bellwether plaintiffs, class representatives and deponents. These enhancement awards are in no way related to damages of any kind.

The MOD believes that these enhancements awards are not subject to a Medicare fee-for-service recovery claim due to the fact that they are derived from an individual's effort toward furthering the lawsuit; that they are in no way connected to compensation for damages; and that these awards, and the methodology recommended by the Special Master, was subsequently accepted and approved by the court. While these awards will be disclosed to CMS, MOD does not anticipate any recovery claim to be applied to these award amounts.

Please let me know of any questions or need anything else.

Thank you,

Scott Duever, Mass Tort Program Manager
